

Turning Points

By: Meg Malay

Dan Hogan

- Dan graduated from Le Moyne College with a degree in accounting.
- Continuously strived to do the work he loved. If he wasn't satisfied with the work he was doing, Dan would follow what he enjoyed.
- He began working for a construction company in Syracuse, New York.

- After about six months of working with Congel-Reuter, they gave him the opportunity to oversee a job all on his own, with the only guideline being a certain monetary return that he was expected to earn during that time.
- After this, Dan exceeded his companies expectations. He tripled the expectations.

- Enjoyed the freedom of being the pioneer of his own life.
- He later expanded his niche to performing his similar structural rehabilitation services on dams and bridges, to name a few; something that at the time no one else anywhere offered.

- Dan now works as a successful contractor in Rochester.
- The defining moment that shaped his career was when he realized for himself he liked setting his own time frame rather than working under someone else's authority.

John Holtz

- He keeps his business in the Rochester area.
- The products he offers is very wide ranging from different makes of cars to several different styles.
- Like other business owners, he was not satisfied until he found something he enjoyed and loved.
